

PREVENTIVE LAW SERIES
DRIVERS' LICENSE EXTENSIONS

Prepared by:

Being an active duty servicemember does NOT automatically exempt you from the requirements for maintaining a current, valid driver's license from your home state. Not all states have an automatic extension for driver's license renewal. Each state has its own law on this matter, briefly described below. THE SERVICEMEMBERS' CIVIL RELIEF ACT DOES NOT EXEMPT MILITARY PERSONNEL FROM UPDATING THEIR DRIVER'S LICENSE. However, many states do allow for more flexibility with regard to how and when you must apply for a license renewal.

NOTE: Some states permit "automatic" extensions of your license beyond its date of expiration. If you plan to rely on this "automatic" extension it is still a very good idea to get in touch with your state's Department of Motor Vehicles to obtain a letter verifying that the license remains valid. This will help you avoid arguments with law enforcement in other states that may not be aware of the "automatic extension." Moreover, letting your local DMV know about your use of the "automatic" extension may prevent the DMV from deleting your information from its records, or sending you stern letters warning you to renew.

Alabama: Alabama residents in the military, or their dependents, can apply for driver's license renewal by mail, if license is less than four years old. www.dps.alabama.gov/Home/wfContent.aspx?ID=30&PLH1=plhDriverLicense-FAQ

Alaska: As long as you or your spouse is active duty, your non-commercial driver's license is valid. Automatic extension for service member valid for 90 days after discharge or return to state, whichever occurs first. You may also request a "military expiration endorsement," though it is not required. www.doa.alaska.gov/dmv/akol/military.htm

Arizona: Automatic extension valid until 6 months after discharge, with notification of active duty status to MVD. Online, phone, and mail renewal available. www.azdot.gov/mvd/driver-services/MilitaryPersonnel
