The normal baseline between points is the low water coast depicted on charts recognized by the coastal state; See UNCLOS, Article 5. It should not be assumed that between points are straight line segments.
The normal baseline between points is the low water coast depicted on charts recognized by the coastal state; See UNCLOS, Article 5. It should not be assumed that between points are straight line segments.
The normal baseline between points is the low water coast depicted on charts recognized by the coastal state; See UNCLOS, Article 5. It should not be assumed that between points are straight line segments.
MAURITIUS: ARCHIPELAGIC, STRAIGHT AND NORMAL BASELINE CLAIM
INSET 4 - CARGADOS CARAJOS SHOALS

The normal baseline between points is the low water coast depicted on charts recognized by the coastal state; See UNCLOS, Article 5. It should not be assumed that between points are straight line segments.
The normal baseline between points is the low water coast depicted on charts recognized by the coastal state; See UNCLOS, Article 5. It should not be assumed that between points are straight line segments.
MAURITIUS: ARCHIPELAGIC, STRAIGHT
AND NORMAL BASELINE CLAIM
INSET 6 - CHAGOS ARCHIPELAGO

British Indian Ocean Territory
(UNITED KINGDOM)

Chagos Archipelago **

* Chagos Archipelago: Administered by UK, claimed by Mauritius

Mauritius' archipelagic baseline claim of the Chagos Archipelago is not recognized by the United States.